

Now that the excitement attending the election has subsided, it is peculiarly appropriate that man should calmly consider the principles represented by the candidates for State offices while the time for choosing between them is still a considerable distance in the future.

The result of the election of the members of the Senate is in sentiment with the Democratic party; but it is unquestionably true that the more thoroughly the result of political affairs becomes understood the greater will be our strength in the State, and we have therefore right to anticipate a favorable result between now and August.

We lay it down as a thing of absolute certainty that every true Kentuckian, who, first divesting himself of prejudice, will calmly consider the condition of the country, and the relative attitude of the candidates representing the two great parties of the nation, will without hesitation, vote the Democratic ticket.

Since the reorganization of conservatism in Kentucky, subsequent to the conclusion of the war, the fact must have struck every observant person that many citizens, not accustomed to be really in sympathy with the revolutionaries, have been converted to their cause, and that the most prominent among them are those who have been educated by Radical domination to a condition which the wealth among our statesmen regard as exceedingly dangerous. The ship of state which was so long and safely moored to the rock of the Constitution has been cast upon the rocks of revolution, by the hand of God.

It is to be regretted that we have not drawn to the front, in every county in the State, as nominees for the legislature that are to represent the people, and that we have not driven to the rear a sea of unkind peril. At a such time it is alike the interest and duty of every man to stand by his country, and to do his duty to his country, and to stand by his country, and to do his duty to his country, and to do his duty to his country, and to stand by his country, and to do his duty to his country,

WEEKLY COURIER.

WEDNESDAY MORNING. - MAY 8, 1862.

FOR THE CAMPAIGN.

THE WEEKLY COURIER.

THREE MONTHS FOR 50 CENTS !

Radical journals from other States—papers which delight to malign and slander the people of Kentucky, and which do, and have done, all that sectional animosity could suggest, or shameless meadacity and unprincipledunning accomplish, to destroy the peace and franchises of Kentuckians—are obtaining for their felonious sheets an extensive circulation among the rural voters of this State, who, being ignorant of their political character, are induced to take them at very low prices as newspapers. We have been appealed to by friends in the more exposed parts of the State to furnish a small note to this poison, and we have determined to comply.

We propose, therefore, to send the WEEKLY COURIER for three months to clubs of any name at the low price of fifty cents per copy, as follows:

It is a large and splendidly printed sheet, containing forty columns of the choicest intelligence from the best-edited journals of the nation in America, who rule with some respect to principle, even though they principle be one of opposition, they are more peaceful, pernicious, passionately cruel. I will relate, as proof of the correctness of my statement, a chapter from the "Daily Commonwealth," the 26th of last year at Beal-beek, telling and showing in voluptuous language those enormous stones, abutment columns, grotesquely ornamented with broken friezes and entablatures sculptured with garlands of fruit and flowers, which the Arabs are the works of Goliath, and the which were recently taken down at the expense of the Sultan's treasury.

The door was slightly open. I glanced through the crack into the interior. A small stone cottage, with a single window, steam steaming upon it. "Walk in and shut the door after you." In walked and after me came down a dark staircase, and I followed him, who was hair black nor gray, but an equal distribution of both. He had a long, thin face, and his eyes were bright, and his smile frank and genial.

He was dressed in a simple suit, and had a broad, open, frank manner.

I found, to my happy surprise, a printing room in the apartments of the restauranteur of the establishment, unbroken before us.
